MEALS AND DINING

Meals beginning with breakfast on Sunday, June 7, are included as part of your tuition. During in-processing you will be given a wrist band to wear. These should be put on and kept on during the week, and are required for entrance to the dining hall for each meal. (They are waterproof and can be worn in the shower). There are no replacements for lost meal bands.

The dining facilities at McDaniel College are very nice. Choices are available at each meal, including a full salad bar, two or three entrees, and a wide variety of desserts and beverages. As long as you don't leave the dining hall, you may even go back for seconds on the same "tab". Leaving and re-entering the dining hall during the same meal is prohibited – we are charged for a meal each time your wrist band goes through the door.

Because McDaniel often hosts more than one group at a time, there is a specified time for each meal. All students are expected to attend meals with their work group and to adhere to the schedule they will be given, and to allow time after each meal to get where they need to be on time. The prescribed uniform must be worn at each meal.

One exception to the meal and dress requirement is the cookout mid-week. Your schedule will tell you when that is, but generally it will be Wednesday evening. During that time, each student is expected to attend and enjoy an evening off as a group – you will need it by then! Casual dress is appropriate, within the guidelines in the "Clothing Requirements" document. This cost is included in your tuition.

The social and banquet the last night of the College are also included in the tuition. The social will include wine, cheese, and small finger foods, and the banquet includes a very nice plated meal.
